Dear Fellow Runners,

Congratulations on completing the St. Luke's Half Marathon and 5K!

I hope that you had a great experience. I certainly did. This was my ninth St. Luke's Half Marathon. And as always, the people – runners, volunteers, spectators – were full of the good cheer and camaraderie that make this event so special.

St. Luke's University Health Network is proud to support the Lehigh Valley Road Runners' efforts to promote exercise and wellness in our community. It is fitting that such a positive event takes place just down the road from St. Luke's Allentown Campus, where this year I began serving as president.

Whether this was your first race or your hundredth, you should be proud of your accomplishment. As a long-time runner, I have seen and experienced first-hand the many benefits associated with our sport. Fitness is a key component of good health, and the more we encourage regular exercise, the healthier we can make our community.

I am pleased to report that hundreds of St. Luke's employees, family and friends participated either as volunteers or runners in this year's event. Everyone who ran is a champion – from the children in the Youth Run to the thousands of other runners who completed the Marathon or 5K.

St. Luke's University Health Network takes great pride in supporting this wonderful event year after year, and I hope you will encourage your friends and family members to sign up for next year's races. Together, let's promote health and fitness in our community!

Sincerely,

HALF MARATHON SEES FIRST NEW VICTORS IN YEARS

John Kingstedt, 1:10:39

Emily Hulme, 1:18:45

The 2019 winners of the St. Luke's Half Marathon included some international flavor among the strong showing from local runners capturing the top spots in the 13.1-mile race. Not to mention, both the men's and women's race saw its first new victors in four years.

More than 1,350 runners took to the Allentown streets for the 35th running of the half marathon.

John Kingstedt, 26, of Stockholm, Sweden, came in first place for males with a time of 1:10:39.

Emily Hulme, 35, of Easton, Pa., took top female honors with a time of 1:18:45, the fastest female finishing time since 2012.

Four-time defending female champion Carly Shea of Lewisburg, Pa., came in second with a time of 1:22:45.

Another 392 runners took part in the St. Luke's 5K, both of which started at William Allen High School and ended at J. Birney Crum Stadium.

Kingstedt said he ran by himself most of the race. "I saw that last year the East Coast and he said he wanted to see this part of the country.

"We came to the States [a week before the race] and stayed a few days in Boston and made the hike toward Allentown. Most Swedes travel to the main cities like New York and LA. It might sound like a cliché, but this represents real America better to me and I wanted to show my fiancé that."

Kingstedt and his fiancé are both students and were drawn to the $500 prize money.

"This is going to pay for dinner in the coming weeks," he said.

Despite living in the Lehigh Valley, Emily Hulme said it was the first time she had ever run any part of the scenic course.

She described it as a great course, and liked the cool and rainy weather, too.

"It was a nice day to be running, though not so good for spectating," Hulme said. "I used to live in Philly so it's always been on my radar, but this is the first time I was able to fit it in my schedule."

The St. Luke's Half Marathon was part of her training for the Vermont City Marathon on May 26 in Burlington, VT.

"I wasn't tapered for this [St. Luke's Half], so I'm really happy with the time. I was hoping for a sub 1:20 and as far under as I could go. I didn't know what the day would bring. It looks good for my marathon," she said.

Hulme went on to run a 3:00:05 in Vermont.

The St. Luke's race series also featured a Family Fun Walk on Sunday and a Youth Run on Saturday. The races are put on by the Lehigh Valley Road Runners with all race proceeds support community and youth running efforts in the Lehigh Valley.

One of the oldest half marathons in the country, the St. Luke's Half Marathon had its origin in 1977 with a full marathon organized by the Lehigh Valley Athletic Association, a predecessor

Jeff LeCompte

A 13.1-MILE TRIBUTE

BY HEATHER MAYER IRVINE

Shortly after September 11, 2001, when the country was still reeling from the terrorist attack that killed thousands and decimated lower Manhattan, Bethlehem firefighter Jeff LeCompte put on his gear, laced up his running shoes, and ran the St. Luke's Half Marathon—then the Runner's World Half Marathon.

"I read an article about another fireman who [ran with his gear] and I thought, 'you know what? I'm going to give it a go,'" says LeCompte, now 60 and retired from BFD.

A lifelong runner, LeCompte, now a firefighter EMT in Reading, was nervous the first year he ran in his gear, some 15 years ago.

"I was in uncharted waters," he says. "But a fireman can't quit or he'd look like a big sissy. I'd disgrace the fire service if I couldn't complete this race."

But LeCompte did finish, and he's laced up every year since. In 2010, fellow firefighter Bob Simons joined LeCompte, and in 2019, the pair ran their last St. Luke's Half Marathon in gear.

"We're cut from the same cloth," LeCompte says of Simons, now 50. "We remember those who serve. We need to respect and honor their families and their sacrifice."

Turning Heads

Today, it's not uncommon to see men and women in army fatigues or firefighting gear run races, often holding the American flag. It's a way first responders and service members can honor their fallen brothers and sisters.

But when LeCompte started running in gear, with the number 342 on his back—the number of New York City firefighters who lost their lives on September 11—he was worried people wouldn't understand.

When Simons started running in gear in 2010, with a tribute to September 11 on his coat, he was worried about what others would think, too.

"Maybe they'd think, what's with the two guys wearing Halloween costumes?" Simons says.

Before Simons toed the line in 2010 it was misting with a chance of heavier rain.

"I heard a woman say to her friend that those guys are smart. They're wearing that because it's raining. I wanted to hang my head. This is what I was afraid of," Simons says.

And sure, there were sideway glances LeCompte says, but in the end the crowds and fellow runners were nothing but supportive.

"It's really, really neat when you're going on and you see a mom or father with a 5- or 6-year-old child and the child will look at us like, 'oh my gosh there are firemen and they're running,'" he says.

Honoring the Fallen

On the backs of their coats, LeCompte and Simons pay tribute to the firefighters who lost their lives on September 11. In addition to the number 343, LeCompte has written the names of Pat Tilman, the NFL football player who joined the army after the September 11 attacks and was killed in action; Welles Crowther, the volunteer firefighter who wore a red bandana and saved 18 lives on September 11 before losing his life when the South Tower collapsed; and Kyle Grimes, a soldier who graduated from Liberty High School in Bethlehem and died in action.

"[Kyle's] classmates are moving on and doing fun things," LeCompte says. "He's done. He's gone. He's not going to get to have a wife or a family or grandchildren. That's stuff we all take for granted every day."

There's another name—Matthew Herzog—on LeCompte's coat, a fallen police officer. He didn't die in the September 11 attacks, but his mother asked LeCompte to remember her son.

"A couple of years ago a woman contacted me on Facebook. She'd seen photos of my gear and asked if I'd put her son's name on my gear," he says. "She was very emotional. People think that no one will remember their son or daughter."

Simons' coat doesn't have individual names, but it dons the 343 number, a note to support the troops, a tribute to New York City, and Crowther's football number 19. He also wears a red bandana on his arm, a tribute to Crowther.

It's the least he can do, Simons says, even when the going gets tough.

"When the blisters start and the gear is heavy, you start thinking to yourself, 'really? I'm running a couple miles wearing this. There were men that day who put that gear on and climbed up how many steps and saved an unknown amount of people and never got out,'" Simons says.

In addition to running 13.1 miles in heavy gear and a 4-pound helmet, the firefighters also each carry an American flag.

"Just carrying the flag makes you feel like I better do this properly and honorably," LeCompte says. "It's not a casual undertaking. It means so much to people. There are veterans who are watching when you go by and you want them to think you're doing this very honorably."

A Lasting Legacy

The years and miles have taken a toll, prompting LeCompte and Simons to hang up their helmets and gear after this year's half marathon. But like the firefighters and service members before them, LeCompte and Simons will leave a lasting impact on the running community.

Separately, the two recall a race several years ago when they assisted a young woman who had collapsed mid-race in the Parkway. She remembers looking up at two firefighters, LeCompte says. Her dad is a firefighter.

The following year on the start line a young woman approached the pair to thank them for helping her when she went down.

"It was neat that she thanked us," Simons says.

As the two look to the future, they hope their efforts to remember those fallen on September 11 will continue.

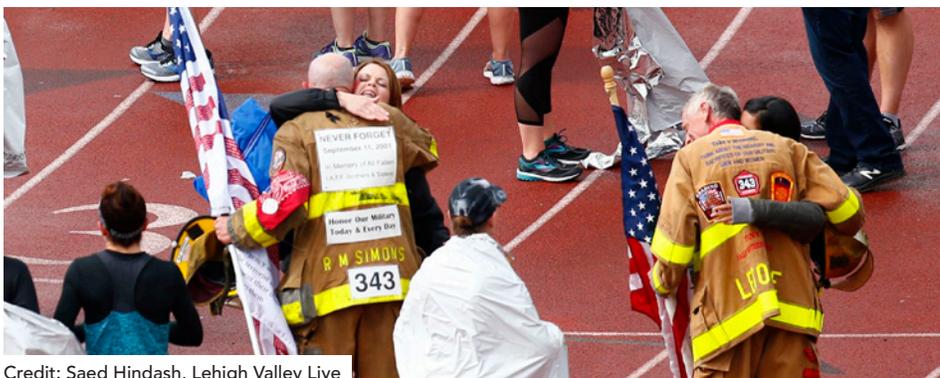

"It's an important day in history that needs to be remembered," Simons says. "We run at the end of April. It's just a little sign of saying, yes, never forget, every day, not just on September 11."

While it's not yet confirmed, LeCompte and Simons are discussing the possibility of running the 2020 St. Luke's 5K in gear, carrying the flag.

LeCompte says the act of running with the Stars and Stripes—even on a crowded, loud race course—is akin to the scene in "Saving Private Ryan," when the flag is gently flapping in the breeze. There's no music, no talking.

"It represents thousands of men and women we've lost in combat," he says. "For whatever reason, the flag gently flapping takes me to a faraway place."

RUN TO REMEMBER

BY HEATHER MAYER IRVINE

Two years ago, Daniel Santiago, now 40, started running. But he wasn't running for himself, really. He had lost his older sister, Luz M. Brandon, to cancer and he didn't know how to cope.

"Losing my sister was the hardest thing I ever had to face," Santiago says. "I knew I needed to do something, and a friend introduced me to running."

Running became an escape for Santiago, who was mourning his sister, a radiology technologist at St. Luke's.

"For me, running is an escape from everything," he says. "Every time I ran I felt free, all the weight and stress I felt would wash away with every step."

The 2019 St. Luke's Half Marathon was Santiago's second half marathon; his first was last year's race.

Santiago has spread his unexpected love for running to his wife, who started lacing up with him after she saw how much her husband was enjoying it.

"Running with my husband has helped me discover something I truly enjoy," Maria Santiago says. "I feel free when I run, and it's great for my health."

Santiago says he hopes his kids will join him one day.

"Running in my sister's memory has given me strength and I've met so many wonderful people," he says.

Without the loss of his sister, Santiago never would have taken up the sport, which has since changed his life.

In September, Santiago will toe the line at the St. Luke's Via Marathon in memory of his sister.

A THERAPEUTIC RUN

BY HEATHER MAYER IRVINE

When Hannah Clark's cousin, a victim of bullying, was just 16 he ended his life. In an effort to honor his memory, and stay focused and fit, Clark, who was in sixth grade, started running with Students Overcome and Achieve through Running (SOAR), her middle school running club.

Now 16, Clark has completed two half marathons—the 2018 and 2019 St. Luke's race—and runs for her cousin, and her coach and mentor, Jodi Walp.

"Cajun always referred to me as the baby sister he never had," Clark says. "It felt awesome that I could finish a half marathon and I felt that he was there beside me."

Walp, Clark says, has helped her keep her head high and run strong, through all kinds of adversity.

"Every time I run a race she tells me to do my best and finish the race no matter what place I finish because there are people there who don't run," Clark says.

For other young people who are struggling, whether in the classroom or at home, Clark emphasizes the importance of running.

"Running is a good outlet because you're out there moving and you can clear your head and think about all the good things about yourself," she says.

HEARTWARMING FINISHES

BY HEATHER MAYER IRVINE

In 2019, Boston Marathon Qualifier Paul Meier laced up to run the St. Luke's Half Marathon, a race he's run many times over the years. But the most important St. Luke's Half, Meier says, was the 2011 race.

"I didn't run a personal best that year," he says. "It was quite the opposite. I didn't even finish."

At just about halfway, where the runners head to Little Lehigh Parkway, Meier didn't feel well. But it wasn't a you're-halfway-through-a-half-marathon feeling. He sat down to massage his legs but became nauseous and extremely sweaty. He recognized the symptoms as heart trouble and decided to walk to the finish.

"Some people have suggested to me that running is not worth the effort because I developed heart disease despite my running," Meier says. "But that is not what I believe. Running has made me aware of how my body performs, and that allowed me to recognize that something was wrong before I had a heart attack."

About two months after the 2011 DNF (Did Not Finish), Meier had a stent placed to alleviate severe arterial blockage.

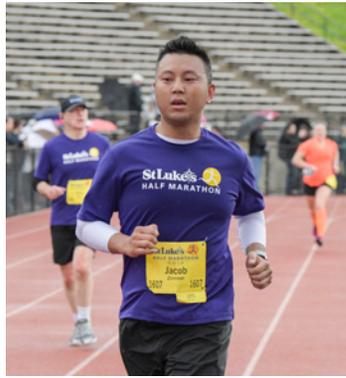

In 2012, less than a year after his stent placement, Meier finished third in his age group at the St. Luke's race.

"RUNNING HAS MADE ME AWARE OF HOW MY BODY PERFORMS."

"I cried twice during my runs after getting my stent," says Meier, a biology professor at Muhlenberg College. "The first time was 10 days after the operation; it was my first run post-operation. I knew from the way I felt that I was going to recover and run again. The second time was at the 2012 St. Luke's race when I went past the rock I had sat on the year before. My goal was to simply finish the race. Winning [and age group award] was a bonus."

Meier, who lives near Reading, works with St. Luke's doctors in his Applied Physiology course, in which local doctors present case studies for his class to derive a correct diagnosis.

This year, Meier nabbed another age group award but was bummed that at least three of his students—Vijay Rao, Emily Davidson, and Andrew Rice—beat him.

Chase Johnson, a fourth grader at Freemansburg Elementary School, and Ja'Aliyah Brown, a second grader at Freemansburg, toed the line for the first time at the St. Luke's Youth Run, and they're hungry for more miles.

"I was really tired, but I knew I had to keep going because I was determined to cross the finish line," says Johnson, who calls his first race awesome.

Johnson, who plans to join his school's running club next year, knows running will help him stay in shape.

"Without running, I won't be in shape, I'll be lazy, and I will never be able to play football," he says.

"I WAS REALLY TIRED
BUT I KNEW I HAD TO KEEP GOING."

Brown pushed through the finish, and a "side sticker," (side stitch) for a different reason: the coveted finisher's medal.

"I knew I could get a medal and this would have been the first medal I ever got," Brown says.

The soon-to-be third grader looks forward to joining the running club, where she knows running will give her energy and strong muscles. Not to mention, running is an accomplishment that makes you proud and thankful, Brown says.

"When I crossed the finish line I was happy, proud, and thankful that my family and coaches and new friends were at the finish line cheering me on. It was the best feeling," she says.

BLACK BEAN BROWNIES

Jamie McKeon,
Director of Nutrition and Deliciousness for
St. Luke's Half Marathon & 5k

This simple substitution greatly reduces the fat content of regular brownie mix, and increases the fiber and protein content. There is still sugar in the mix, so you still don't get to eat the whole pan. Sorry!

INGREDIENTS

- 1 15.5 oz. can of black beans
- 1 brownie mix
- 1 pan sprayed with oil
(or non stick)

INSTRUCTIONS

Spray 9" x 9" baking pan with oil or non-stick spray.

Preheat oven to 350 degrees.

Pour beans and liquid into blender and puree. In a mixing bowl, combine brownie mix with pureed beans.

Stir with a spoon.
Fold into pan.
Bake as directed on box.

VEGAN MEATLOAF (MAGDALENA)

- ◀ Jamie McKeon, Director of Nutrition and Deliciousness for St. Luke's Half Marathon & 5k

Chef Jamie swears by this vegan recipe, saying it tastes just like meatloaf. Toss onto whole wheat pasta for spaghetti and Magdalena balls. Serves 6.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 package (1#) firm tofu-drained
- 1 cup Quaker oats
- 1 cup brown or red lentils, (cooked)
- 2 tablespoons celery, diced small
- 2 tablespoons Spanish onion, diced small
- 2 tablespoons red pepper, diced small
- ½ teaspoon salt
- 1 tablespoon Dijon mustard
- 4 tablespoons ketchup
- ½ teaspoon fresh rosemary, chopped fine
- 2 tablespoons fresh parsley, chopped
- ½ teaspoon Italian seasoning, dry
- ▶ Ketchup, for brushing

INSTRUCTIONS

Preheat oven to 350°F. Spray muffin tin with cooking spray.

Mix all ingredients together, and brush tin cup with ketchup.

Bake for 20 to 25 minutes, or until lightly browned.

Let rest 5 minutes before serving.

BAKED EGG IN AVOCADO

Heather Mayer Irvine, Author

The Runner's World Vegetarian Cookbook

Few things go better than avocado and eggs. Cut out the toast middleman by baking your egg right inside the avocado for a protein- and healthy-fat-packed breakfast. Serves 2.

INGREDIENTS

- 1 ripe avocado, halved and pitted
- 2 eggs
- ▶ Hot sauce, to taste (optional)
- ▶ Salt and ground black pepper, to taste

INSTRUCTIONS

Preheat the oven to 425°F. Scoop out a spoonful of flesh from each avocado half to make room for the egg. Slice a flat section onto the rounded bottom of the avocado so that it will sit steadily. Place the avocado halves on a baking sheet.

Drizzle the hot sauce to taste (if using) into the avocado halves. Crack an egg into each half—don't worry if the whites spill out a little. Sprinkle with salt and pepper to taste.

Bake for 15 minutes, or until the eggs are cooked through.
